"Moving beyond the Ivory Tower: How do Science and Universities Contribute to the Sustainability Transformation?"

Workshop I:

“Implementing the Agenda 2030 (Sustainable Development Goals) and Climate Policies” chaired by Prof. Sabrina Habich Sobiegalla, Dr. Berthold Kuhn (FUB), Prof. Dai Hancheng (PKU), Seminar Room 1.2052

"Moving beyond the Ivory Tower: How do Science and Universities Contribute to the Sustainability Transformation?"

- Should universities become active stakeholders in the public discourse or would this affect their independence as research and education institutions?
- May the 17 SDGs become a normative compass for research or does this interfere with the freedom of speech?
- How do research innovations from different disciplines affect the societal transformation to sustainability?

Workshop Purpose

The purpose of this workshop is to jointly assess and critically review the relevance of the Sustainable Development Goals framework for academic research and practical sustainability initiatives

Challenges:

- Agenda 2030 as the output of a diplomatic consensus
- Path dependency of research and research frameworks
- Main driving agents at national level are Ministries and government agencies with specific sectoral mandates and international NGOs with a focus on development cooperation
