

JUNIOR RESEARCH GROUPS

Funding Opportunities and Career Paths

Tuesday, February 18, 2014 | 5:00 – 8:30 pm

 JUNGES
WISSENSCHAFTSFORUM
DAHLEM

Junges Wissenschaftsforum Dahlem is part of Freie Universität Berlin's institutional strategy „VERITAS – IUSTITIA – LIBERTAS: International Network University“. It is a platform through which junior researchers at Freie Universität and its partner institutions on the Berlin-Dahlem research campus can engage in the creation and exchange of ideas. It enables researchers to look beyond the confines of their disciplines, to discuss issues of common interest, to get information about funding opportunities, and to organize workshops.

Junior Research Groups: Funding Opportunities and Career Paths

The German academic system offers different paths towards a career in academia and research. Aside from the traditional habilitation process and the creation of junior professorships, junior research group programs are the most important of these. Within such programs, excellent post-doctoral researchers can realize their own independent research projects, thereby gaining the necessary qualifications for a professorship. The third event organized by Junges Wissenschaftsforum Dahlem will give an overview of all current funding programs, starting with one of the most prominent, the Emmy Noether Programme by Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft (DFG). Speakers from DFG and Freie Universität Berlin will give short presentations and answer your questions. In the second part of the evening, junior research group leaders from different academic disciplines will discuss their experiences.
